

SYDNEY Adventist College students celebrated National Day of Thanksgiving with a morning tea at Burwood Police Station recently. The college community wanted to show appreciation to the police for all their hard work in making the area safe. The college's captain Jennifer Latu said the students really enjoyed saying thanks in a practical way. "I was happy to see that our small gesture of gratitude to the police officers could make such a difference," she said. Police at Burwood Local Area Command presented the students with a certificate of appreciation.
